

Curving, organic lines were the foundation for this collection. The looks were inspired by the ways in which sweeping silhouettes and rounded edges can alter the shape of the human figure. Stiff lines become softer and more fluid as they travel down the body. The color palette includes reddish oranges, bold burgundies, greys, and warm tans, allowing the wearer to feel confident yet grounded. The earth bound color palette emphasizes the organic feel to this collection. Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec's Aristide Bruant, in His Cabaret further inspired this collection through the print's strong use of line. The simple, bold marks prove that basic shapes can have the strongest visual impact.

Fabric choices include faux suede, poplin, devore satin, heavy crepe de chine, ribbed knit, and wool. Each look combines the fabrics in various ways, creating entirely new feels and textures. The woman of this collection is not afraid to layer different garments or to mix prints. These looks are meant for a strong individual who is not afraid to assert her (or his) uniqueness. The curving lines create a sense of movement and fluidity, resulting in organic shapes that push the collection forward. In the end, the interplay of linearity and sweeping silhouettes creates a modern eclectic feel.
